Unlawful Sleep in Economics

Date: 19th July 2025
Subject: Investigation into Mysterious Case of Sleepwalking During Lecture

At 11:10 a.m., teacher noticed student Manya apparently awake but motionless during a discussion on GDP growth. Upon closer inspection, she was discovered mid-nap, eyes half-open, head slightly tilted, and pen still moving in random loops. Classmates confirmed she had been in this "meditative state" for 20 minutes. Teacher attempted to wake her up, only for Manya to mumble "demand and supply" and resume dozing.

Notebook review shows dream-inspired doodles shaped like coffee cups. The incident likely caused by chronic exposure to PowerPoint slides and insufficient sleep from binge-studying K-dramas.

Advised to rest more and maybe pretend to be interested next time.
